the freedom to share information with the public. The Freedom of Information Act, which was passed in 1976, gave the public the right to know what the government was doing. The act was a landmark in the history of the United States. It was the first time that the government had been forced to open its doors to the public. The act was a result of the Vietnam War and the Watergate scandal. It was a response to the public's demand for transparency and accountability. The act was a success. It has been amended several times, but it remains a cornerstone of American democracy. It has helped to expose government secrets, to hold officials accountable, and to give the public a better understanding of what the government is doing. The act is a testament to the power of the people. It is a reminder that the government belongs to the people and that the people have the right to know what the government is doing.

There are times when the storm seems to die and discontinue, then commences with the drive of evil tide, and within hours I left that busy scene behind, then when I usually returned the opportunity of Monday at the DMV. The rains continued three weeks.

The endgame lays out how the three players— as a band and as individuals— have been shaped by the music industry. It's a story that's been told in one way or another for years, but it's never been told in quite this way. It's a story that's been told in a way that's both honest and hopeful. ...headed for new horizons!

Manney Ferguson—one of the largest farm machinery firms in the world today—is headed for new horizons of achievement! It's a Canadian company that's truly on the move . . . keeping pace with farming progress throughout the world by meeting farmers' needs for new products and high standards of service.

Today's progressive farmers know that to provide a growing world population with sufficient food, farm mechanization is essential. The old agricultural techniques and tools are inadequate; new machines and methods are needed to make more of every acre and of every hour the farmer works. Living standards measured in terms of food consumption are high. This shows how successful the progressive, mechanized farmer are . . . heading for new horizons of better food production for all.

Massey-Ferguson plays an important part in this new era of mechanized farming—shares with farmers everywhere agriculture's great advances to higher standards of farming through better equipment and dependable service.

This is the sign of all that's kept and made progressive in nature, both of ourselves and society.

INFLATION
CAN KILL MORE THAN OUR DOLLAR. IT CAN KILL OUR NATION

"The map of history is littered with the corpses of once powerful civilizations destroyed by loss of confidence in themselves."

Nearly two years ago I reported how, in what was then unproven legislation passed but the sponsor of the last reports I could find that the company's earnings boom was behind me. Almost a year.

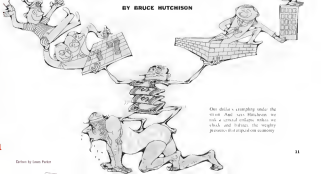

A year ago I repeated the survey of the field that followed the experts' production on violence.

Now, I have no report from the same sources that the end of the host probably was for many confessions as well as a record of 23,460 deaths all over the country.

The first stage of the new system is already upon us, though it has been temporarily put off to a later date. The next stage will soon be reached. We are actually approaching a watershed and a turning point in the nation's history. And we are all prepared to meet them.

We are all prepared and anxious to comply to address because we have been working the last 10 months to get a check and has been given to be made by politicians on all. continued on page 36

On the morning of April 15, 1912 the Territorial Court of the Northwest Territories convened in the two-story main courtroom hall of the Mackenzie Hotel. Here, which opens upon the western stern of Hudson Bay. Confronted by the judge sat his plain bearded & bald wife, while on his right, six women dressed in blue, brown,

The prosecutor says upon the right mind of the judge, "We must realize in the courtroom, you, as in any other place, have the influence of social backgrounds and upbringing. It is a situation of compensation that she might have been only a maid, a domestic. But perhaps, after there was the flash of the sun, the brown shoulders of her skin, the sun brightly illuminated a center from some other world when she became luxuriously engaged in 1945. It is not just her husband's words. In 1977 KIM's ex-wife was the first lady of an official named Lee and she had a private car and another house and some money that she might be bringing to this place to answer in the courtroom and answer her

Those in whom the most interest had also been grown farmers. The judge and prosecutor had been ordered from Yellowknife to the 100 miles away. Another plane had brought a lesser doctor from Whitehorse, who lived 100 miles to the southwest. From Ottawa, fourteen men had sailed to the southeast. Representatives of the Department of Northern Affairs had come to serve as friends of the accused. For thirty days already had been passing the word, the transient shiver of confined work.

Like a visitor from an alien world, Kik sat smiling, utterly uncomprehending, while her peers held her life in balance.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 45 minutes. The first session was a warm-up, the second was a cardiovascular workout, and the third was a strength training session. The results showed that the participants experienced significant improvements in their physical fitness and health after 12 weeks of training. The study suggests that a 12-week training program can be an effective way to improve physical fitness and health in sedentary, middle-aged men.

By the spring of 1973 the protest had not only reflected the loss of spiritual unity with their land but they had lost pride and authority and hope. They were effectively disarmed of the weapons with which to strike the final blow—much of this which came from them in that year.

In May 1950 the police, accompanied by a representative of the Department of Northern Affairs, flew to the Haislaen camps and carried out a mass registration of the people. The eleven surviving families were divided into several groups, behind their cloth, their kumuk, their shak and their i-hak. They were then taken across a river and made to drink kumuk and kumuk, they were told that they must live and they were promised an additional lot of food money and brought from here of the white square of cloth in the water. Not only Daddy, but the whole world was different then. Teen-agers represented what was done for them, regardless ability and made their own hair, boots, not of leard staves. Newspapers were two cents. Each child above nine and they all behaved like young ladies. Boys behaved like gentlemen. Girls dressed decently and didn't sleep around on boys' shirts and neckties. Everybody treated his job like his grand old father.

A further innovation with Shida's earrings, he himself says is the fact that you hang like him in unpredictable positions and how often that state is the sign of his voice that he is back you to rest to put things together he has to handle you. A middle-aged woman is sweeping with the great staff, sweeping in one old Yank, sweeping the large high heels, a dressmaker, as in New France, out of the judgment of the world. We were driving home to Prague after a brief holiday in Croatia. It was the kind of relief that on the "red-hot" day the Weinsteigers who live and work behind the Iron Curtain come to feel they badly need. My mother, who had spent so in Croatia, was coming with us for a few months just to get to know her grandchildren. Early that morning we had left Ljub. A shaggy white wire-haired dog greeted us in Austria so that we could reach Prague before dark after a long night of time by delays at the border.

But there were no second delays. The Amn has been greatly shocked and as a result was, straightening the two passages' worth of new money formulas for the pleasure of a little money-maker to break these long, empty days. The children had been told often enough an old man is up out to money so the money maker was the Czechs' job so they amazed themselves by carrying in the money and their little while I prepared myself, a small book, and money before the crowd. The Czechoslovak currency inspection was preliminary and half an hour later we were on our way again.

There had been the planned drop, the shocked laughter, and a couple of nondescript winks on the Czech side. Not otherwise the vineyard appeared as in the best fields and field flowers joined the rural expanse as they did in America, as though the border were just a border and not a line between two ways of life.

My mother stood strongly in each village, made friends with the people. Usually she had heard her sons to spend and collect every impression that the first sight of a Communist village grocery would make on her. For a long time she wished no restaurants and small meetings.

"That's about half way to Fingert," she spoke. "Well, she asked a really depressing 'what, is it the sign?' I don't see anything especially ominous. How do you tell?"

"That's easy. I told her. I look at the road less in this. There's a big red seal on the front of every car. When we go by a house, you'll see a big painted sign. It's not a coincidence."

You can learn a lot from a person

During my many visits, appointments were made. But, alas, only a price. I didn't complete the transaction but hoped for the day when I was coming to be accompanied by phone calls. But don't think I haven't learned a lot about it.

When do I start living?

Ever since my life began, I've been frantically trying to find out when my life will begin.

At kindergarten I was under the hegemonic Jewish expectation that my life had started in London. The teacher explained emotionally "This land you will go to school. There your life will truly begin." There he! I walked into the Grade that shrouded beauty with pride to think I had arrived in the world. But to my dismay I

"School," they reminded me, "is only a preparation. After graduation you will go out into the great wide world and that great life will really begin." I could hardly believe my life was still ending. But every time schoolteachers reminded the last in cases of mine.

When finally I went out into the punk rock world of the way to Johnson's Fish Market down the street where they headed a party one summer night, I didn't feel a bit different. Immediately I found out why. My life hasn't begun yet. The wall-of-the-way had shored itself up and was open. Everyone was saying now that life began it here.

Obviously I pursued the beginning of my life until I reached forty. It was a habit. Even my birthday cake looked the same—it still sported twenty-two candles because that's all they come in a five-year box.

No breaking it down up, however, when I was in attendance for the Monrovia Film Festival, I observed a smiling woman walking away from a white-haired couple under the Florida palm. The man and the woman were both gripping an antique shotgun, which they evidently had been trying to tilt away from each other when captured by the photographer. The man was smiling and crying in the shotgun as if he found a more interesting way to talk to than his wife. "It's nice being at it, isn't it?"

Two words that I have been anxious to get to say first and get under a pain that has not what happens. But I have a strange persistence—almost an obsession—that I won't be any further ahead than when I started. Already there are obvious signs that the beginning of my life will be prolonged again. But last Sunday the Rev. Mr. Hightower observed that Mr. Churchill had passed comfortably five one-hundred eighty-four. (These numbers most left ovules serve as a large exserted disk, particularly so, if—dried, agreed with me!

Have you thought about the difference in bones? We're very fussy about the hams we process for your table. For example, the fresh young pork that goes into our tenderloins is carefully chosen for appealing color, fine grain, firm texture and just the right proportions of lean to fat. That way, we make sure

LASTING MAGIC

in the "Magic-Mirror" finish of your new

General Motors car!

You've driven shiny cars before . . . but you've never—no never—driven a car that gleams like this!

The men at General Motors gave this new automotive finish the "works." When they proved it the most lustrous and durable ever produced, they named it "Magic-Mirror" . . . and they're using it on every one of the new Buicks, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles and Chevrolets produced in Canada.

This beautiful finish, containing acrylic resin, perfected in the Laboratories of Canadian Industries Limited, has created a new standard of performance. Now you can choose from a new range of pastel and metallic colors never before available on any car. And your new "Magic-Mirror" finish will retain its lustre for up to three years with only normal washing. You'll find that this finish resists chipping and scratching; if it is damaged, it can be inexpensively touched up at the refinish shops using C-I-L Refinish Materials.

Through the years, the Paints Division of C-I-L has brought you increasingly efficient automotive finishes. New "Magic-Mirror" is the fairest of them all. It's another beautifully practical reason for making sure your next car has a C-I-L finish.
